

Hatred Pours Over Wall

BERLIN (AP)—West Berliners' pent-up hatred of the year-old Communist wall poured out Monday night in a series of violent protest demonstrations. They included attacks against Soviet vehicles and the barricade itself.

What West Berlin officials hoped would be a quiet observance of the first anniversary of the Red wall turned into near chaos that lasted until late evening.

Screaming, cursing crowds of West Berliners, blocked by West police from approaching the wall, found other outlets for their anger.

Smash Windows

Hurling stones and beer bottles, they smashed the windows of a Russian bus returning soldiers from duty at the Soviet war memorial in West Berlin.

Two Soviet sedans were surrounded by youthful demonstrators who shouted "pigs" and "dirty huns" at the Russian occupants, then tossed bottles at the vehicles.

West Berlin police freed the vehicles and arrested at least one demonstrator.

Other West Berlin crowds used the wall for target practice, scoring with hundreds of paving blocks.

Protest Parade

In the afternoon, a protest parade of West Berlin youths touched off a battle of tear gas and water cannon between East and West police across the barricade.

There were no reports of serious injuries.

The car-stoning incidents occurred near Checkpoint Charlie, where Soviet vehicles cross into East Berlin.

West Berlin police finally succeeded in breaking up the crowds as they banged on the Soviet cars and shouted insults at the soldiers inside.

Attack The Wall

Nearby, at Wilhelmstrasse, a group of demonstrators attacked the wall with paving blocks. Driven off by West Berlin police, they marched eastward along Kochstrasse, parallel to the wall and about 100 yards away.

At the corner of Friedrichstrasse, West Berlin police stood shoulder to shoulder to prevent them from advancing farther. A block away, at Charlottenstrasse, the crowds again hurled rocks at the wall.

By this time, the crowd of marchers had swelled to about groups of honking West Berlin motorists. Cars parked along Kochstrasse and neighboring streets joined in the din.

Column Of Cars

Adding to the confusion was a column of about 300 West Berlin cars, half of them empty taxis, which descended Kochstrasse in the opposite direction to the marching crowd, tooting madly.

The column of cars was diverted by police from the immediate neighborhood of the wall just before it reached Friedrichstrasse. The drivers turned into the neighboring streets, still leaning on their horns.

West Berlin police also were having trouble with another crowd of demonstrators about three miles to the north, in the neighborhood of Bernauerstrasse.

Walled Off Windows

This is the border street where the Communists have walled off the windows of all the houses. Before this was done, there were many escapes—and some deaths—of East Berliners who jumped from the windows.

During the evening hundreds of marchers tried to reach Bernauerstrasse. Some carried a cross lettered with the words "We accuse."

Earlier, trouble started at Wilhelmstrasse when an East German fire truck hose—a so-called water cannon—drenched youngsters carrying the same cross.

East and West police exchanged hundreds of tear gas grenades.

Sit Down In Protest

The foremost group continued its march, keeping as close to the wall as possible. Police halted them about five blocks from Bernauerstrasse. About 40 sat down in the street as a protest. Police removed them bodily, some of them resisting.

Tooting horns of thousands of cars massed along the wall on the West Berlin side drowned out the solemn tolling of the city Freedom Bell.

At the corner of Wilhelmstrasse and Zimmerstrasse, opposite the Nazi's old Air Ministry, a crowd of 500 West Berlin youngsters gathered and roared: "Out with Ulbricht!"

JFK Rejects Quick Tax Cut

Should Economic Need Arise Congress Will Be Called Back

TURNED THUMBS DOWN — President Kennedy turned thumbs down on a move for a quick tax cut last night when he addressed the people over radio and television. He did reaffirm his goal of a multi-billion dollar reduction.

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy turned thumbs down Monday night on a quick tax cut and reaffirmed his goal of a multi-billion-dollar reduction to become effective next Jan. 1.

But he pledged to call Congress into special session and ask for immediate action if an economic crisis should develop later this year.

No Sign Of Crisis

There is no sign now of any such crisis, the President told the people via television and radio from the White House.

Kennedy said there is an "absence of a clear and present danger" to the economy and thus a quick tax cut "could neither be justified nor enacted."

He recited economic data, and pointed to charts, to show that the economy is moving up—that "there is every reason for confidence by the American people in the American system."

He renewed his pledge to ask Congress next year for a massive reform of the American tax system with substantial income tax rate reductions as part of the overhaul.

This plan, including all-bracket cuts in individual and corporate rates and rooting out of inequities would, he said, place billions of dollars in the hands of consumers and businessmen. And this, in turn, would create new jobs and expand the American economy, he reasoned.

Bite Is Severe

The present bite on the American people, he said, is too severe, hampering economic growth. But, he said, immediate tax reduction is a weapon that should be "fired only in clear emergency." To propose one at this time, he said, would needlessly undercut confidence at home and abroad.

As for the permanent reform measure he proposes for next year, he said leaders of Senate and House, plus Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, have assured him of speedy action in 1963.

He made no mention of the attitude of Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., powerful chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who has opposed most of Kennedy tax reform ideas this year.

Rep. Mills said in a statement released after the broadcast that he endorses fully the President's decision not to ask for a tax cut at this time.

Mills said he is not convinced that a tax cut is required now for economic reasons.

Displays Charts

Kennedy displayed charts to the television audience to show that the country has bounced back a long way from the recession he said was in progress when he took office in January 1961.

His figures included gross national product (total of goods and services), up 10 per cent; industrial production, up 16 per cent; wages and salaries, up 10 per cent; corporate profits up 26 per cent, and unemployment rate down 23 per cent.

But in comparison with some other countries, Kennedy said, the United States has been standing still in economic development for five years. So, looking directly into the television cameras at his unseen audience, he appealed for assistance on a five-point program.

Asks For Help

"I'm asking your help, the help of Congress and the American people, to push to enactment before adjournment, measures to speed up our economy," he said.

He listed specifically:

1. An investment tax credit he said would stimulate business outlays for modern machinery—something Western Europe has used as an economic stimulant.

2. A bill to provide employment opportunities for youth—to give them jobs in forests and parks.

3. A continuation of extended unemployment compensation.

4. Tariff-cutting legislation, to permit expanded exports and let American business share in the great Common Market of Europe.

5. Financial help to colleges and universities—twice as many young people will be trying to enter college in 1970 as in 1960, Kennedy said.

In speaking of his plans for a 1963 tax cut, Kennedy let it be known for the first time that he favors substantial reductions amounting to several billion dollars. He did this by alluding to "the billions of dollars" which "next year's tax legislation would place in the hands of businessmen and consumers."

In The Past

In the past, Kennedy had merely said that revenue-cutting provisions of the forthcoming program would exceed, in immediate impact, the revenue-raising features.

Many economists have been speaking recently of a net tax cut of between $5 billion and $10 billion a year. Kennedy's language suggested that he is coming around to this point of view.

Answers Laxity Charges

HARRISBURG (AP) — State health department pharmacist that the state has not exercised drugs "are definitely not correct." Health Secretary Charles L. Wilbur said Monday.

He described the pharmacist, Dr. Harris Bernstein of Plainfield, N. J., as a "disgruntled" employee who apparently felt he should have more responsibility.

He said Bernstein, with the department only five months before resigning from his $10,564-a-year job July 27, was a "young man in a hurry."

Bernstein was quoted in a newspaper as saying that the Health Department does not move fast enough in checking experimental drugs, including thalidomide which has been blamed for deforming babies.

"We didn't have the authority in the thalidomide area, as Dr. Bernstein says we did," Wilbur told a meeting of the Drug, Device and Cosmetic Board. He is board chairman.

Wilbur explained that the drug was experimental never licensed for distribution and that the federal government had sole responsibility for recovering any of the drug that was distributed.

Bernstein said the department could move faster if there were less red tape and "paper shuffling."

"Of course, we don't always move as fast as we'd like," said Wilbur. "This may be due to thoroughness, but there must be a system of checks and balances."

The time Dobrynin spent in Rusk's office talking about Berlin was conspicuously brief because the American devoted some time congratulating the Russian on the double orbit of the Soviet cosmonauts. The explanation was that the Russian diplomat had very little to say—and certainly nothing which would change the situation, top-ranking officials said.

Rusk, however, used this opportunity to remind Dobrynin of the June 25 western proposal for a four-power meeting to discuss incidents at the Berlin wall.

Dobrynin, officials said, replied that his government has already rejected the Western invitation. Rusk answered that especially in the light of violent events in Berlin Monday the United States still believes the Kremlin should reconsider its rejection.

The Republican National Committee, in its party publication, Battle Line, complained that Rusk had not taken advantage of his meeting with Dobrynin to call for destruction of the Berlin wall.

"Instead," the committee said, "coupled with pictures of Communists police hurling tear gas grenades into crowds of free Berlin-

Shorter Week Is Labor Aim

CHICAGO (AP) — Big labor made the 35-hour work week—without a reduction in take home pay—its big gun Monday in a drive against unemployment.

The Executive Council of the AFL-CIO endorsed a double-barreled attack—in Congress and at the bargaining table—to win full employment.

It tossed aside the pleas of President Kennedy and his chief business and labor aides who have said repeatedly that the nation cannot stand a cutback in effort or a sharp boost in labor costs in its space age competition with the Communist world.

Principal Wedge

Union president George Meany revealed that the principal wedge to spread employment will be a drive to incorporate double-time pay for hours worked in excess of 33 a week—a radical shift from the present standard of time-and-a-half for more than 40 hours of work.

The heavy penalty for keeping a man on the job beyond 33 hours, Meany told a news conference, is calculated to make it economically necessary for employers to enlist additional manpower.

"All other attempts to deal effectively with unemployment have failed," he said. He said the AFL-CIO program is yet to be worked out in detail. He predicted that the biggest hurdle will be getting Congress to accept the shorter work week as an amendment to the Fair Labor Standards Act.

More progress, he said, is likely to come in bargaining negotiations with employers. He pointed out, "some unions now have the shorter week. And they won't let it on their own."

The policy departure from the 40-hour standard was voted by the Executive Council at a brief session opening its five-day summer meeting in Chicago.

The council issued a statement recounting that it has held off while the Kennedy administration sought to deal with the employment problem.

Shorter Work Week

Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg and Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges both have urged labor leaders recently to back the administration's efforts to increase the country's work force without increasing the per-man cost of labor. A shorter work week implies less work for the same money and a sharp upward spin in prices.

Meany said he favors an income tax cut which would add $10 a week to the employee's take-home pay. This, he said, would turn $5 billion a year into the nation's economic channels.

Senate Defeats Space Amendment

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate defeated Monday the first attempt by opponents to require the administration's communications satellite bill.

It rejected, 56 to 19, an amendment by Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., to require the State Department to conduct or supervise all negotiations with foreign countries and approve all agreements involving the proposed global satellite communications system.

Supporting the Gore amendment were 19 Democrats. Voting against it were 29 Democrats and 27 Republicans.

The bill would set up a privately owned, government-regulated corporation to operate the U.S. part of the system and allow it to conduct business negotiations with foreign countries and agencies with the State Department advising on foreign policy.

Big Issue

The big issue will be decided Tuesday when the Senate votes on a bipartisan leadership proposal to invoke debate-limiting cloture and end a filibuster that has blocked final action on the measure.

Opponents of the bill, battling for government ownership of the proposed communications corporation, have offered dozens of amendments and these could require days to dispose of even if cloture is adopted.

Sen. Robert S. Kerr, D-Okla., in a lengthy argument against the Gore amendment, said it would "destroy the corporation to put shackles about it so that it couldn't do anything except when the State Department permits it."

Kerr said that all leading members of the Kennedy administration were supporting the bill as it now is written.

A Strong Argument

Kerr cited Russia's latest space feats as a strong argument for ending what he termed "the senseless filibuster now going on in the Senate."

"This filibuster only endangers the precious lead we have over Russia in developing an efficient system of worldwide communication satellites," Kerr said.

Kerr Speaks

Kerr, who is chairman of the Senate Space Committee, spoke out in a statement as the Senate approached a showdown vote Tuesday on efforts to break a filibuster against the administration's bill, which provides for private ownership of a U.S. space communications system.

But Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., a leader of the filibustering band, used the Soviet accomplishments to support arguments for government ownership.

Gore told the Senate the government "should not farm out an important part of the (space) communications field to private industry" if it plans to make an all-out effort to maintain the advantage the United States now enjoys in this area of space developments.

Nation Is Pledged

In a statement Sunday Gore said this nation is pledged to develop a global system and make it available for use by all members of the United Nations but the pending bill would hinder such a program.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican leader, predicted the Senate will vote a time limit on further discussion of the bill—something it has not done since 1927—but Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the outcome will be close.

A brief flurry of excitement was set off when opponents of the bill demanded an investigation of what one of them called a charge of bribery.

The incident subsided when Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said he was not offered any bribe by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to support the administration bill.

"I do not want to charge the company with that," Long told a reporter.

In New York, a spokesman said any inference that the company had offered anyone a bribe is without foundation.

Urges Scientist As Astronaut

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP)—Dr. Harold Urey said Monday America's manned satellite flights to date have yielded little scientific information because the astronauts in the space craft were not scientists.

The Nobel Prize-winning physicist said he has been urging the space agency to include at least one scientist on each three-man Apollo crew sent to the moon.

Sufficient information to justify the extreme cost of lunar missions could be provided only by the observations of trained scientist-astronauts, Urey said. He is here for a week-long conference on lunar exploration at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

He said he has received no assurance from NASA that scientists would be among the 10 new astronauts to be selected this month to supplement the seven military test pilots of the Mercury earth-satellite project.

Urey pointed out, however, that NASA has been subjected to many kinds of pressure as to the types of astronauts to be selected for future missions.

Little Scientific Information

The physicist from the California Institute of Technology and Engineering at La Jolla, Calif., said the manned satellite flights to date have yielded disappointingly little scientific information because the occupants of the spacecraft were not scientists.

CHICAGO (AP)—The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals cleared the way Monday for an early showdown on plans of the nation's railroads to eliminate thousands of jobs they consider unnecessary.

The court acceded to a request by the railroads for fast, emergency consideration of their motion to dismiss a lower court temporary injunction restraining them from putting a job-slashing schedule into effect.

Judge Elmer J. Schnackenberg of the appeals court gave the five unions involved until 5 p.m. Tuesday to file opposing briefs and pleadings. He said the appeals court might wish to hear oral arguments Wednesday.

The strategy of the railroads has been to win court approval of their job slashing order and then send the entire dispute to Washington for a White House settlement.

If the appeals court dismisses the lower court injunction, the five operating unions involved are expected to serve strike notices and President Kennedy then could prevent any work stoppage for at least 60 days by appointing a fact-finding board.

The five rail unions represent 210,000 engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen and switchmen. They have announced they will appeal from an order of U.S. Dist. Judge Joseph Sam Perry denying their petition for a permanent injunction against the scheduled work changes.

The carriers are appealing Judge Perry's temporary injunction restraining them from making stiff rules changes until an appeals court rules on the legality of the management notice. The railroads are seeking a settlement.

The federal framework of non-binding recommendations made Feb. 28 by a commission appointed by President Eisenhower while he still was in the White House.

The carriers served notice in July that work rules in line with these recommendations would become effective Thursday. However, Judge Perry ruled in a suit brought by the unions last week that this notice was invalid because a 30-day waiting period had not been met.

The railroads then countered by substitution of a more stringent work rules notice they originally issued Nov. 2, 1959.

The temporary injunction applies to this more stringent order which would eliminate immediately the jobs of 40,000 diesel firemen and lop off 25,000 other jobs in the next five years.

The presidential commission had recommended that the jobs of 13,000 diesel firemen be eliminated at once and that the 27,000 other firemen not be replaced when they retire, die or are transferred to other duties.

In their appeal, the railroads contended Judge Perry lacked jurisdiction under the Norris-La Guardia Act to issue an injunction in a labor dispute.

Soblen Hopes For Freedom

LONDON (AP)—British government sources said Monday that they felt certain a Home Office deportation order served on convicted Soviet spy Robert A. Soblen will be upheld in the courts.

Legal Maneuvers

Legal maneuvers now aim at overturning a deportation order issued over the weekend by Home Secretary Henry Brooke after El Al, on orders from Tel Aviv, Israel, refused to transport Soblen to New York.

A number of precedents exist in English law holding that courts cannot interfere with a home secretary in deportation cases since such an order constitutes an executive rather than a judicial act.

Soblen's legal team will petition the High Court Tuesday for a writ of habeas corpus for his freedom—opening what may develop into a complex legal battle.

Soblen knifed himself aboard an Israeli El Al airliner July 1 in an attempt to avoid a life prison sentence in a United States federal prison for passing wartime secrets to the Soviet Union. He was given emergency medical treatment in Britain.

Man Rescued From River

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A 32-year-old Scranton, Pa., man was rescued by two policemen Saturday after he leaped from a bridge into the Passaic River.

Ernest Griffin (of 547 Back St.) struggled furiously with his rescuers before he was pulled from the water by a rope tied to his waist. He was uninjured and taken to Marlton Medical Center for observation.

Police said Griffin was standing in the middle of the bridge when East Newark patrolman John Mackoff drove up and asked, "What are you doing there?"

Griffin replied, "I'll show you," and leaped into the river. Mackoff threw two life preservers which Griffin discarded. Five minutes later, patrolman Fred Parrillo and Frank Peake arrived and dove into save Griffin.

Griffin continued to struggle on the roadside of the bridge which links Newark and East Newark. The officers had to shackle his hand and foot to restrain him.

Police said he would give no reason for his jump.

A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., in the class of 1926, through subsequent promotions, Adm. Cavenagh attained the rank of Rear Admiral as of July 1, 1964.

His postgraduate training included instruction in engineering at the Naval Postgraduate School, and the University of California, Berkeley, where he received a Master of Science Degree in Mechanical Engineering.

Many Decorations

Among his many decorations and medals, Admiral Cavenagh wears the Navy Cross for action against Japanese forces in November 1943, the Legion of Merit with "V" and Oak Leaf Cluster, and other awards.

Accompanying Adm. Cavenagh to Stroudsburg was his Assistant Chief of Staff for Naval Reserve and Training, Captain David N. Morey U. S. Naval Reserve, who lectured to the seminar on "Management from Moses to you".

Scranton Man Sentenced, Fined, In Highway Deaths

JOHN Tanchyn, 43, Scranton, was sentenced to serve six months to a year in Monroe County Jail yesterday on two counts on involuntary manslaughter. He was also fined $500 and costs on each count.

Judge Fred W. Davis sentenced Tanchyn to six months to a year on the first count and six months on the second, to be served concurrently with the first sentence. A jury last September found him guilty on charges that he caused the deaths of Llewellyn F. Andre, 39, Stroudsburg, RD 3, and Mrs. Anna Evans, 48, of 878 White St., Stroud Township, in an auto accident on April 29, 1961.

Tanchyn's Stroudsburg attorney, J. Joseph McCluskey announced

Defendants In Robbery Lose Bid

ROBERT and Vandy Hall, defendants in the West End Branch of the Monroe Security Bank & Trust Co. robbery, had their request for certain government information pertaining to their alleged role in the holdup turned down by Federal Judge Michael H. Sheridan.

While denying the motion, Judge Sheridan, directed the government to furnish the two defendants with information relating to time and place of their alleged offenses.

The New Jersey brothers had asked for answers to two questions proposed in a bill of particulars relating to the manner in which they allegedly aided and abetted another defendant, Joe Lee Sims, in committing the bank raid which netted more than $8,000.

Judge Sheridan noted in his memorandum ruling that the manner in which the defendants committed the offenses charged are a matter of evidence which the government need not state or reveal in advance of the trial.

Also charged with participating in the holdup last Oct. 20 are Otis Zehner and Everett Williams. All of the defendants were employed as migrant workers in the Brodheadsville area around the time of the holdup.

Four Held In Firearms Charge

TWO adults and two juveniles are being held for Monroe County Court on charges of violating the uniform firearms act.

They were arraigned before John C. F. Foelker, Stroudsburg justice of the peace, last night. The juveniles, both 17 and from Stroudsburg, RD 2, are being held in juvenile quarters of Monroe County Jail.

Jailed in default of $500 bail each are Thomas Miller, 21, of 515 Main St., Stroudsburg, and Delbert Hauser, 18, Kunkletown, RD 2.

The four were apprehended by Stroudsburg police early yesterday morning and an automatic pistol was found in the car.

Four Deeds Filed At Court House

FOUR deeds were filed yesterday in the office of Mrs. Jeanette F. Batory, Monroe County register and recorder:

Stillwater Lake Estates, Inc., Pocono Summit, to Maxwell and Beatrice R. Bender, Philadelphia, property in Tobyhanna Township; Pocono Lakeshore, Inc., to Emery and Sandra Polinchok, Emmaus, property in Monroe Lake Shores.

Stanford R. and Annabelle Daniels, Palmerton, to Wilbur J. and Shirley C. Christian, Aquashicola, property in Eldred Township; Pocono Lakeshore to Charles A. and Jennie Mutchiga, Trenton, N. J., two properties in Monroe Lake Shores.

Walter Lauds Correction Of Deficiency

WASHINGTON, D. C. — U. S. Rep. Francis E. Walter, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, had both criticism and praise yesterday for federal agencies involved in a 13-month committee investigation.

Walter said that the committee was "amazed and shocked" by lax security procedures of the Defense Department and National Security Agency prior to defection of code clerks Bernon Mitchell and William Martin to Russia in Aug. 1960.

He added that the two agencies did an outstanding job of correcting deficiencies uncovered by the investigation. He said the Defense Department took 22 steps of correction and that the NSA fired two top officials. The committee released its report yesterday.

Capt. Bartholomew Gosnold named Cape Cod for the cod fish in 1602.

Pleads Innocent In Assault Case

ADRIAN Maurice Bennett, 35, Millroy, pleaded innocent to charges of rape and assault and battery at an arraignment before Justice of the Peace John C. F. Foelker, Stroudsburg, yesterday.

He was remanded to Monroe County Jail pending a hearing before Foelker. Complainant in the case is Mrs. Laura LaBar, 76, 330 Main St., Stroudsburg.

Mrs. LaBar charged that Bennett assaulted her Saturday night as she slept in the dining room of her home. Her daughter, Gladys Bittenbender, told newsmen her mother had rented Bennett a room Saturday when he said he knew Sol Rosen, a man who has roomed at the LaBar home for more than two years.

Mrs. LaBar, who has been in ill health, suffered bruises of the face, neck and arms, but did not require hospitalization.

Bennett was arrested by East Stroudsburg police as he hitchhiked on N. Courtland St. near Eagle Valley Corners. They turned him over to Stroudsburg police.

Drought Not Over; Says Withrow

THE drought is not over. John Withrow, Monroe County Agricultural Extension agent said yesterday that although the rain has helped the dry situation, the problems have not been solved.

The dry season served to stunt crop growth and in cases cut it out all together. Withrow said the rain "helped in various places, but it depended on the area."

"Pastures are showing more green," Withrow pointed out, "and the hay crop is also showing more growth."

"In relation to the hay crop," Withrow said, "there were some cases where a farmer didn't get a second cutting, but a third is growing up. That would sound good," he added, "but the situation with the damp weather makes it hard for cutting hay."

Recommendations
Withrow recommended the fertilization in hay fields and said that growth in hay fields was greater where fertilizer was used.

"We still need more rain," Withrow said, "the drought isn't over. And," he emphasized, "the effects of the drought will still carry over into the winter, affecting herds and feeding situations with the cattle."

The rain has been of some aid to lawns and truck-farmers in the area. Golf courses have benefited also. The creeks and water supplies have benefited from the rain which has been coming with a better frequency than noted in July.

Water restrictions remain the same as they have since the beginning of the drought. Conditions have improved, but have not returned to normal.

Rep. Walter Eyes Return Of 'Prosperous' Slate Belt

BANGOR — Congressman Francis E. Walter, D-Easton, urged in a speech in the Slate Belt: "Let's reinstate this area as one of the most prosperous in America."

"This can be done by electing Democrats in this year's 'very critical campaign'," he said.

Rep. Walter warned against electing Republicans because he said, "I am thoroughly convinced as never before that the Republican party stands for absolutely nothing."

He added, "The manner in which they oppose blindly every proposal made by the leaders of the Democratic party is proof conclusive they have no ideas newer than McKinley."

Walter, who is seeking a 16th consecutive term in the House, spoke at the annual picnic of the Slate Belt Democrats at the VFW grounds at Meyers Crossing.

On restoring prosperity to this area he said that it is "slowly but surely going downhill" with the decline of coal, slate and cement industries.

The Tooles Island dam and recreational development and the area's natural beauty will bring tourists and revived purchasing power, he predicted.

The 1960 Census accounted for 40.5 million married couples.

Woman's Death Is Ruled 'Suffocation By Drowning'

THE autopsy performed yesterday in Allentown Hospital revealed that Mrs. Mary Ann Overpeck's death was "suffocation by drowning," Lamont Zimmerman of Lehighton, Carbon County deputy coroner said.

Mrs. Overpeck, of Weissport, was found at 10:20 a.m. Sunday floating in four feet of water in the Parryville Dam.

Lehighton State Police investigated the incident and questioned Richard Quigg of 261 N. Fourth St., Lehighton, who was reported to be the last person to see Mrs. Overpeck alive.

He told police that he offered to drive Mrs. Overpeck to Weissport and stopped at the dam. The last he saw of her was when she became angry because of his advances and got out of the car and said she would walk home.

Mrs. Overpeck, whose home address in Pen Argyl, had been living at the home of Florence Ann Evans of Weissport since last month.

She was separated from her husband Howard, leaving her nine children in the care of a housekeeper. She had gone to Weissport to look for work.

Her children range in age from two-year-old twins to a 22-year-old son.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p.m. in the Hunsicker Funeral Home, Brodheads-ville.

Beltone announces a new sub-miniature way to hear again at ear-level

Regulations Run Riot

There are influential groups in this country, numbering among their ranks men in high office, whose major goal is to interject the regulatory power of the government more and more into the affairs of citizens. The philosophy back of this would seem to be that many, perhaps most, of the producers and sellers of commodities are sharpers, and that many, perhaps most, consumers are incompetents who don't know what they want or whether they're being stung or not.

Take, as an example, the proposal to establish a Department of Consumers. This new cabinet-level authority would investigate production, distribution, prices for goods and services, the quality and suitability of goods, and "the degree to which the trade and commerce of the United States succeeds in satisfying consumers needs for goods and services."

In other words, practically the whole economy of the country would be under investigation—and, unless past precedent is meaningless, this would be followed by demands for regulations of every conceivable kind. The end result would be that producers and sellers would no longer be free to make and distribute what they felt consumers wanted, and consumers would no longer be free to buy what they wanted, unless a government bureau agreed with their judgment.

Freedom of choice is a fundamental freedom. Excessive, needless regulation is its eternal enemy.

Opinions Of Other Editors

A Good Welfare Bill

The $300 million welfare bill which Congress has just enacted is one of the bright spots of the legislative year. It aims far more at rehabilitation and retraining of relief recipients than ever before.

In addition, it is more generous to States which — as Pennsylvania has done — are instituting their own training programs for relievers. The Federal share of the cost has been raised from 50 to 75 per cent, which should be a substantial help.

If much of our welfare load is caused by technological unemployment, and many experts say that it is, training displaced workers to cope with technological progress is really getting down to fundamentals.

Among other admirable features of

George Sokolsky

Pink Hair

One sometimes has queer experiences with new drugs put on the market after plenty of laboratory tests but with inadequate clinical data.

Like many folks who have, at one time or another, been given a signal that man may be ambitious but not immortal, I need to medicate to keep going on a heavy schedule which takes between 12 and 15 hours of work each day. And most of the stuff I take seems to do me good, the proof being that I am still alive and kicking.

However once in a while I get a lulu. I cannot blame my doctor because I had, for months, argued with him that everybody was taking this wonder drug etc. etc. He said that he knew about it but that it had not been used long enough to convince him that the side effects were not perilous. Then one day, he prescribed it; not only for me but for other patients.

It did not hit down every patient, but I began to lose my hair, not only on my head but on my body. My head hair turned a pinkish white. It would have looked quite beautiful on an ancient female, but it was tough on me particularly when my eyebrows disappeared and my lower ends of my legs became scaly.

Also I took on an itch. I thought it was the seven years itch but it only lasted a short but bothersome seven weeks. Every day, many times, my wife had to cover me from head to foot with a thick oil.

It took some time to discover which particular medicine was doing the mischief, but by trial and error and a little detective work the culprit was discovered and a cease and desist order was entered.

As soon as I desisted from taking the stuff, the itch ceased. Then the hair began to grow, thick and black, as it had not been for decades. The eyebrows came in a jet black. It took a little longer for the eyelashes to lose their albino pink. Finally, my body was covered with black hair, a little too heavy and too much, but the proof of manliness was on the chest.

Looking back on all this, I can understand how enthusiastic laboratory workers and chemical companies became when they discover something that can save life. But one needs to study the side-effects and it is probably so that, in some instances, the side-effects can only be studied on human beings.

It is difficult for a layman to discuss these subjects intelligently because one needs to be trained in too many fields to have precise knowledge. What is needed is more Frances O. Kelseys to protect us from the consequences of over-enthusiasm or business greed in matters which affect human life. The evidence concerning thalidomide establishes not only the need for tighter law but a strengthening of the Federal Drug Administration so that it can do a bang-up job.

Sometimes, we have good laws but we do not give the agencies enough personnel and money to enforce them. The worst example of that was Harry J. Anslinger's Bureau of Narcotics, which was staved until the use of narcotics in this country became a public scandal.

Anslinger's services to this country became legion and his Bureau, now under Henry J. Giordano, surely should be strengthened until this plague is wiped from our land.

Mr. Kelsey had been deservedly honored by President Kennedy and he has called upon Congress to give the FDA additional authority. It would be wise for the drug and chemical industries to help the FDA and to organize to police themselves.

They need to protect themselves not only from law-suits but from the moral obligation of not destroying human life or maiming or crippling human beings. And it is to be hoped that the sensations over misjudgment will not encourage an inane attitude toward research. We do live longer and better despite the errors.

Veteran's Guide

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q — I have heard that many veterans and widows are not taking advantage of VA pension plans that would give them more money. Is that true?

A — Yes. Apparently thousands do not fully understand the new pension law and the VA is still anxious to explain all the facts. Suggest you contact or write to nearest VA office.

Q — I am in the armed forces overseas and plan to enter training under the War Orphans Education program. I understand the VA is authorized to provide transportation at Government expense to and from my place of vocational counseling. How can this be arranged when I am overseas?

A — It cannot be arranged. VA does not provide vocational counseling overseas nor can travel be authorized back to this country for such counseling. You should decide where you will go to school when you return to this country. If you then write to a VA regional office near that school, advising when you will be there for counseling, time will be saved in setting up your counseling appointment.

Q — Do the Veterans Affairs Offices of the State Department act as an overseas arm of the Veterans Administration?

A — The offices have the function of administering directly VA educational and training benefits and VA medical care and treatment benefits for eligible veterans in the countries comprising Western Europe and in Mexico.

Area Of Disagreement

The Pennsylvania Story

Of Concern To Taxpayers

By Mason Denison
(Second of Three Parts)

Harrisburg—Unquestionably of concern and interest to Pennsylvania motorists and taxpayers is the answer to the question: How well did those test sections matching Pennsylvania highway specifications hold up under the incessant pounding?

Space of course does not permit reporting here all the results of the various and sundry test blocks, but the results of those test blocks most closely paralleling Pennsylvania highway requirements seem to indicate one thing: Pennsylvania specifications for its huge highway system easily can be classified as "adequate" and "a-okay" on the Interstate system but perhaps questionable on the primary system.

With this thought in mind, a look at the specifications and test results for the tough, heavy-duty now a-building 1575-mile Interstate expressway system in Pennsylvania shows the following picture.

Pennsylvania Department of Highway specifications for its share of the Interstate system call for ten inches of reinforced concrete on a six-inch sub-base.

At the AASHO test site there was no actual ten-inch concrete surface in test, the nearest being 9 3/4 inches and 11 inches. (Obviously if the 9 3/4-inch concrete surface held up, so would the 10-inch.)

Here's what happened: The test section not only held up quite satisfactorily during the two-year test and withstood the 1,114,000 load "applications" (run-over) by the 22,400-pound single-axle truck load (maximum permitted in Pennsylvania), but on the "serviceability scale" ranged from 0 to 5, wound up with a serviceability rating of 4.5, or in the official classification: "very good."

Thus it would most certainly seem that on the basis of the Impartial AASHO National Road Test, Pennsylvania is not under-designing its Interstate system by its stretch of the imagination—but in actuality is producing the "finest of the finest."

The question might well arise as to what about the use of asphalt—isn't it being on the Interstate system in Pennsylvania?

The answer to this is a qualified "yes—but only to limited extent". The use of asphalt on Pennsylvania's Interstate network is confined to only sections where the right-of-way crosses abandoned hard coal mining operations, where mine subsidence is possible and where therefore a flexible roadbed is needed. Such sections embrace a total of only about 25 miles. What of the specifications and test results for these sections?

Pennsylvania Department of Highway specifications for asphalt paving on these limited sections of the Interstate system call for a four-inch asphalt surface with a 12-inch base and a 14-inch subbase.

Again however, the AASHO tests did not carry these exact specifications, the nearest being five inches of surface, nine inches of base, and 12 inches of subbase (using the AASHO conversion formula specifying in the case of asphalt that one inch of asphalt surface equals three inches of base).

This test section ran the full two-year test cycle, took all the 1,114,000 load applications (maximum 22,400-pound axle load) and wound up with a "serviceability rating" of 3.5—"good."

From the tests therefore it would seem that Pennsylvania has adequate room for assuming an air of satisfaction in knowing its 1575-mile Interstate system of expressways is indeed in quite proper design—designed to meet the wear and tear of the years!

State Police of the Millford Barracks found a 79-year-old New York City man in the woods near Dingmans Ferry. He had been lost for more than eight hours.

A large apple tree fell on a cabin owned by Mr. and Mrs. Laton Osborne, Delaware Water Gap. Guests occupying the cabin escaped uninjured.

Final plans were completed for the annual Delaware Water Gap Firemen's Carnival. Plans called for the event to run three nights.

The Allen-Scott Report

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — Premier Khrushchev intends to visit Red-ruled Cuba.

The Kremlin leader will do this as part of his plan to attend the session of the UN General Assembly that meets in New York this fall.

That's what Dictator Fidel Castro has boastfully told several Latin American diplomats. According to him, Khrushchev agreed to come to Cuba in response to an invitation from Raul Castro, commander of the armed forces, during his recent stay in Moscow.

The Communist Castro regime has repeatedly endeavored to prevail on Khrushchev to make an official visit to Cuba. Verbally he has been warmly responsive, but yet to do anything about it.

How much truth there is to Castro's claim remains to be seen. But there can be no doubt he is urgently in need of a spectacular diversion to distract the smoldering attention of the Cuban people from their mounting grievances and disillusionments.

Foremost among them is the persistent deterioration of their national agriculture and growing shortage of basic food commodities.

In keeping with all Red-dominated countries, Cuba under Castro has botched the farm industry. Three years ago Cuba was self-sufficient in food production, and had the third highest daily calorie consumption per capita in Latin America—after Argentina and Uruguay. Today, the situation is exactly reverse.

In the three years of Castro's gory and despotic rule, Cuba has become a food-deficit nation depending heavily on imports, chiefly from Communist countries, to maintain a below-maximum food consumption level that has sunk to the lower brackets of the Latin American list.

When Castro came into power in January 1959, Cuban food stores were well-stocked and buyers could get all they wanted. Today, every food essential is stringently rationed. Even fish are scarce, and oranges, once exported, now can be obtained only on a doctor's prescription, and then not more than eight at a time and in a limited number of specially-designed shops.

The Grim Details—This tragic condition is graphically summed up by Leon Mears, Agriculture Department economist, in a comprehensive analysis of what is transpiring in this field, as follows:

"Cuba has a favorable climate, highly productive land, and a labor supply essential for the expansion of agriculture production . . . But land and labor are not being used advantageously. Labor shortages are becoming increasingly critical. Many of Cuba's trained managers and skilled technicians have fled the country, and some who remain do not share the political views of the government and are not being utilized.

"Disruptions caused by the revolution with the resulting rigid government control, and the difficulty in obtaining needed imports of farm machinery, spare parts, fertilizers, pesticides, and other farm needs from Soviet bloc sources are also retarding production.

"The failure of the once-prosperous agricultural sector and its continuing deterioration, with far-reaching consequences, is perhaps the most significant economic product of the Castro revolution to date, a failure which the regime has been forced to admit but unable to rectify."

Mears' detailed study reveals clearly how every segment of Cuba agriculture has been blighted by Castro's misrule. Following are highlights of this dismal record:

Sugar—In the 1950's, this product brought Cuba an annual income of around $500 million, of which some $325 million came from the U.S. Now Cuba sells most of its sugar to the Communist countries at a considerably lower price. Even worse, this year's crop is around 30 per cent under 1961; 4,815,000 metric tons as against 6,767,000 tons.

Chief causes of this astounding failure are mismanagement, worker indifference and shiftness, and incompetent planning. "Che" Guevara, top Communist leader, in a frank report, attributed the sugar disaster to, "We all thought all we had to do was to sit around and wait for the harvest to arrive. But it didn't turn out that way. And there were other factors. Cane cutters worked only a four-and-a-half day week, and in many instances the best canes were torn up, or fields close to sugar mills were plowed, leaving only distant plantations. Many, many mistakes were made."

Rice—Cubans are heavy rice consumers; prior to Castro the per capita consumption exceeded all other countries in the Western Hemisphere. This year's rice crop is even less than 1961, which was below par. In both years the sharp drop was due to mismanagement and incompetence, plus lack of rainfall. The result is heavy dependence on imports, some from food-scarce Red China, of all places, and severe rationing of this major staple.

Beef and Hogs—Output in both has steadily declined since 1960, due to fantastically wasteful slaughtering and mismanagement. Meat was one of the first foods rationed, and is now virtually impossible to obtain in most Cuban cities. Black-marketing has soared, despite tough new laws with penalties of up to "five years' hard labor."

Tobacco—Second to sugar as an earner of foreign exchange. Until early this year, three-fourths of Cuba's tobacco exports were to the U.S. They are now banned by edict of President Kennedy.

The same order barred coffee, cacao, molasses, fresh fruits and vegetables which were worth upwards of $50 million annually to Cuban growers.

Poultry—Until Castro's Communist rule, Cuba was self-sufficient in poultry production. Output more than doubled between 1955 and 1959, when a U. S. type broiler industry was introduced. Production of eggs greatly increased. But output of both poultry and eggs sagged sharply in 1960, again due to mismanagement, labor difficulties, gross waste and incompetence.

Milk—A shortage developed within months after Castro took over. This staple is now tightly rationed.

Inside You And Yours

Adults In Diapers

By Burton H. Fern, M.D.

What do you do when your home-bound patient has lost all bladder control?

First, you give that tender, loving care he so desperately needs. He feels like an untrained child. His self-respect pours down the drain every time he wets the bed.

He wants to be accepted as an adult just like before. One flash of disgust across your face can drown him in self-pity.

Be cheerful—even when you have to change his bed more often than Baby's diaper.

Simplify your job. Stack clean linen on a nearby chair—in the same order you'll need it—bottom sheet on top because it's needed first.

Watch For These

You'll have to fight against bedsores and diaper rash. Sluggish circulation, damp pressure and irritating ammonia are natural enemies.

Air pillows, cushions and doughnut-shaped supports can take the pressure off beginning bedsores.

Exercise and massage limber up sluggish circulation. Frequent changing and germ-killing ointments and powders help fight irritating ammonia. Germs gradually manufacture ammonia in all that wetness.

J. P. Savitt, better known as Jack, is high in the clouds these days with a letter from the President's wife, Jackie.

Mrs. Kennedy, via secretary Letticia Bardige, penned the Stroudsburg resident a note, thanking him for sending clippings the write-in vote Jackie received in the primary election in Monroe County.

Mrs. Kennedy pulled a vote for judge of election in one of Monroe's districts last May.

Frank Gochal, the Bartonsville insurance man, is warning the public on the reliability of mail order insurance firms.

Gochal points out that state insurance commissioner, Francis R. Smith, explains that the mail order insurance solicitation practice is not always illegal, but that most companies operating in this fashion are not registered to do business in Pennsylvania.

As a result these companies do not have to comply with Pennsylvania requirements which are aimed at safeguarding the public.

The commissioner does not have the power to regulate the rates, policy provisions, or claim practices of insurance companies not licensed by the commonwealth.

To follow Gochal's warnings, it would be wise to get official, first-hand information on all matters from established men and firms in Monroe before going on a mail order spree.

Cleansing creams with a lanolin base protect and lubricate dry, cracking skin. Special powders and sprays can erase unpleasant odors.

Diaper-like disposable underpads can ease your laundry burden. Each pad contains several thicknesses of soft absorbent tissue with a waterproof plastic undercoat. Unlike rubber and plastic sheets, underpads absorb moisture. And they're thrown away long before any odor develops.

Protecting The Mattress

A special three-layer cotton sheet with similar plastic undercoating can protect the whole mattress. Even after washing, these sheets are soft, comfortable and wrinkle-free. Adult-sized diapers and short plastic-lined sheeting also help.

Dear Abby

A Wise Word!

DEAR ABBY: In answer to SMALL QUARREL: Several years ago I worked with a man who once said to me, "I'd give anything if my wife would greet me when I get home from work, and make me feel she's glad I'm home."

He said he'd never tell her because if he had to ASK her, it wouldn't be the same.

Sometime later he and another man went on a fishing trip. Their jeep went out of control and he was killed. At 38! I've never forgotten this. Now, every time I see his still-young widow, I think of all the wonderful opportunities for affection she passed up, and how now, if she could hear his foot-steps on the porch, or his key in the lock, she'd come running, and throw herself into his arms.

Please don't use my name because the widow has never known this. So, to SMALL QUARREL, "Be glad your husband TOLD you he wanted to be greeted at the door. And do it with love, not a sense of duty." Thanks for printing this, Abby. I wouldn't miss your column for the world.

LIL

DEAR ABBY: I just came back from two years in the service overseas. All the time I was gone I wrote to my girl back home. I'm not much of a talker, Abby. What I mean is, I can say something better in a letter than I can in person. I guess it's because I am on the shy side. My girl is also on the shy side. Please don't think I'm stupid, but I honestly don't know what words to use when I ask her to marry me. If you will tell me what to say, I will memorize the speech.

SHY GUY

DEAR SHY: If you love each other, she will be happy to hear four little words: "Will you marry me?" She's probably all set for the question and has memorized her answer.

DEAR ABBY: What is a person supposed to say when she invites people to dinner and they say, "Can I bring the kids?" I never plan on children at my dinners and I don't ask people if I can bring mine.

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: Say, "I would prefer that you leave the kiddies at home. This is an adult party."

Unload your problem on Abby. For a personal reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to ABBY, care of this paper.

Just Between Us — —

—By Bobby Westbrook

What with the Russians playing ring-around-rosy around us in space and squirting tear gas and water over the Berlin wall, death on local highways, Mrs. Orma LaBar being assaulted, and foul-mouthed kids making anonymous telephone calls, the news yesterday was enough to make anybody feel disgruntled.

Which I was until I started doing the social page where all is sweetness and light, romance and red ribbons. It was Mrs. Russell Hamblin's red ribbons which she's asking Garden Club members to tie on the door handles of their cars which did it, really.

Beating the drum for the Hawkes Hill meeting, Marjorie is never one to do things by halves — and I doubt if the Russians arranging for their cosmonauts to rendezvous in space went to any more trouble than she has arranging for a rendezvous at the bowling lanes.

Somehow the idea of a caravan streaming with red ribbons from here to Bartonsville strikes me as irresistibly funny. Like me, getting the wrong stamps on two letters I was mailing simultaneously, and finding out too late that I'd airmailed a letter from the East Stroudsburg post-office to Stroudsburg.

But I'll bet it works. Oh, everybody could probably find their way to Bartonsville on their own, anyway, but all the telephoning back and forth and the sort of gala feeling of red ribbons is generating its own excitement and they'll probably have the biggest meeting in years.

Which is the main idea, anyway, since Mrs. Hutton is really an outstanding person and the opportunity to visit her home is not one to be missed lightly. A personal invitation, or personally involving a lot of people in the planning is the most sure-fire way I know of getting out a crowd for anything.

I forgot to ask Marjorie what arrangements she'd made for getting everybody back from Bartonsville, but I'm sure they'll make it safely. I wish I were as sure about the space men — I hope the Russians haven't forgotten about getting them back. It must be getting awfully stuffy by now.

Having let the world in on the flights while they were still in progress, the Russians can hardly say "What a cosmonauts!" when they're asked if they've landed yet. Oh well, it's a funny world when it's easier to orbit the world sixty-seven times than to cross the street in Berlin.

Burrus-Dildine Wedding Is Held At ES Church

The marriage of Miss Gladys Carole Dildine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Dildine, of 1527 Wallace St., Stroudsburg, to John E. Burrus, was solemnized on Saturday, June 30, in the East Stroudsburg Methodist Church.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Burrus, 400 Normal St., East Stroudsburg.

Rev. Roger C. Stinson and Rev. Harold C. Eaton officiated at the 2 p. m. ceremony.

The altar was decorated with white carnations and baby's breath, with white satin bows marking the pews. Larry Dildine, cousin of the bride, and Newton Taylor III, cousin of the bridegroom, served as acolytes.

Robert Wolbert sang "O Perfect Love," "Bless This House" and "The Lord's Prayer." Robert Currier was organist.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a gown of silk organza over taffeta, trimmed with Alencon lace and seed pearls. A scalloped neckline, long sleeves and a basque waistline were accented by the bouffant skirt. A lace panel was picked up with rosettes of silk organza and flowed into a chapel train. Her fingertip veil was attached to a crown of seed pearls, crystals and lily of the valley. She carried a bouquet of white roses and ivy.

Miss Eloise M. Cohen, Stroudsburg, was maid of honor. She wore a dress of light blue nylon organza with coop neckline, three-quarter sleeves and tapered belt skirt with tiny bow trim. Matching Dior bow of nylon over organza held a circular veil. She carried a bouquet of pink roses, white daisies and ivy.

Miss Abbie Jane Frisbie and Mrs. John T. Lee, both of Stroudsburg, were bridesmaids and Miss Susan Dildine, sister of the bride, and Miss Connie Burrus, sister of the bridegroom, were junior bridesmaids.

They wore similar dresses and headpieces of light blue nylon organza and carried bouquets of white daisies and ivy. The bouquet

First Aid Course To Be Offered At Tobyhanna

Tobyhanna — The Standard First Aid Course, approved by the American Red Cross, will be offered at the firehouse in Tobyhanna beginning on Thursday, Aug. 23, at 7 p. m., it has been announced.

Sponsored by the Coolbaugh Twp. Volunteer Fire Co., the course will be held on five consecutive Thursdays and will cover hemorrhage control, shock prevention, artificial respiration, care of fractures, transportation of the injured and care of common injuries.

Because of the increased demand for the Fire Co. Ambulance Service more personnel trained in first aid are needed. President Bonner Marshall and Chief Engineer Lloyd Knecht both urge that as many people as possible take the course with special emphasis on the younger firemen.

The instructor will be George J. Rosenberg of Tobyhanna, a member of the Fire Co. and Ambulance Corps, and a qualified Red Cross instructor.

Sweet Sixteens Honored At Double Party

The Lessig home on N. Courtland St., was bursting with excitement last week when the playroom was transformed for a "Sweet Sixteen" birthday party in honor of Chickie Lessig and Barbara Michaels.

Balloons, ribbons, flowers, streamers and favors formed the background for the cakes: a heart cake, a doll cake, and two identical cakes bearing the names of the guests.

The party began with two hours of ice skating at Ice-A-Rama, Penn Hills, adjoining to the Lessig home for games and dancing and refreshments until 12.

Each guest received a dog plaque as a remembrance. The guests of honor received many gifts from the guests.

Men Have A Sense Of Humus But Not About Women In Their Own Garden Club

By Conrad Oliver

Syracuse, N.Y. (AP) — They're dedicated to good fellowship and the love and appreciation of beauty. But they don't let women join them (except at Lancaster, Pa.). They are the 10,700 members of the Men's Garden Clubs of America, dispersed among 254 local affiliated clubs from Sylacauga, Ala., to Syracuse, N.Y., from Cape Cod to California.

Most raise flowers. "Some may want to raise turnips," Bryant Horne of Jackson, Miss., president of the national organization, says. "It doesn't matter. We want men to get out and till the soil, to grow something."

Flowers Look Best

In their latest project, endorsed by their board of directors, they have gone to Washington with a proposal to distribute vegetable seeds among Peace Corps workers in underdeveloped nations.

At home, a spot check of members (at their 27th annual convention June 26-28 here at Syracuse; attendance 1,070) bears out a philosophy expressed by J. T. Wheeler of Beaumont, Texas, a self-described frustrated farmer: "Bean-growing isn't anything pretty. Your flowers are for looks."

Wheeler is a member who "just tears into the garden" to tend his camellias and azaleas after a day in an oil company's office as a section supervisor.

Some women help their husbands in the garden, although most men assert the women are better at arranging flowers.

Wives Do Work?

"Some wives," Horne confides, "actually do the work, and the men take the credit for it."

The Daniel Neins of Lancaster, Pa., raise azaleas. "We had a white one, it was like that" — Mrs. Nein spreads her arms wide.

Mrs. Nein is one of the women members of the Lancaster's men's garden club, a fact the

Secretarial Skills Often Keys To Prestige Jobs

Do you want your career in business to sprout the kind of heavenly wings that take you beyond a down-to-earth chores to at least a prestige status job with the chairman of the board?

Happily, there are ways to plan for this kind of opportunity, says Ruth I. Anderson, Professor of Business Education at North State Texas University, who has written a book on the subject.

Expanding Field
The book, "Secretarial Careers" (Walck, Inc.) is helpfully directed to all girls and women considering, or in, secretarial work, a field in which, the author points out, more than 30,000 new secretarial jobs are created each year due to business expansion.

These secretarial jobs are predominantly women's opportunities, too, Miss Anderson says in her book, because today 19 out of every 20 persons employed as typists are women.

But it wasn't always that way.

"Rigors" Of Typing
As a matter of fact, in 1881, when a course in typewriting was advertised for women, the newspapers openly scoffed at the whole idea and lost no time in saying that a course such as this would be too hard on the female constitution and that women would break down under the strain of a six-months' course!

Well, we didn't break down, girls! And somehow the words just don't apply except when you use them, as I'm using them now, to "break down" specialized opportunities in secretarial careers.

Among these opportunities for specializing are work as U. S. foreign service or armed forces secretaries; bilingual secretaries; medical secretaries; legal secretaries; executive secretaries; social secretaries; engineering-scientific secretaries; public stenographers; educational secretaries; civil service secretaries.

Complete details on how to qualify for these specialties are given in the book.

(To qualify for success in any secretarial field, however, Miss Anderson suggests you ask yourself three main questions:

(1) Do I have the personal qualities required for success in the job?

For example, can I think ahead, think for myself and handle any situation that arises? Do I have initiative and a sense of responsibility? And can I take over a

Beans Gain Color, Flavor When Mixed With Zucchini

Beans! Is there any other food so time-honored? Pork & beans were put into cans as far back as 1871, so that makes them one of the first modern-day convenience foods. That's quite a claim to fame!

Canned pork & beans with tomato sauce are so flavorful heated right from the can, but, due to one of their most outstanding characteristics — versatility — beans join well with a variety of fruits and vegetables. The result? Luscious casseroles or skillet dishes.

Zucchini, for example, not only adds a delightful note of color, but an extra nutty flavor to canned pork & beans. Add also some chopped onion and chopped fresh tomato, spice delicately with sweet basil, and you have a picture-worthy skillet dish and a mouth-watering one as well. Try this wonderful bean dish soon. It will prove to be a smashing success when served with a tart and crisp green salad and thick crusty slices of French bread.

Zucchini Beans

1/2 cup sliced zucchini
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

1 can (1 pound) pork & beans with tomato sauce
1/2 cup chopped tomato
Generous dash basil

In saucepan, cook zucchini and onion in butter until tender. Add remaining ingredients. Heat, stirring now and then. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Tuesday, August 14, 1962
Make an extra effort to get things off to a bigger and better start for a much improved week. Attitude, action and fact will count. April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Achieve as much as possible early in the day so as not to leave too many chores and unfinished business for later when you may be more tired, less enthusiastic. Investigate new opportunities. Good luck.
May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — Examine your inner feelings to determine your true sentiments and sense of values. You may now be misled by your emotions.
June 21 to July 23 (Cancer) — With your personality and persuasiveness you can be an effective influence in places where stumbling blocks have been put in. Lunar rays encourage your spirit of enterprise.
July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Like many others, you may have a time of it just getting your own being in shape to tackle every-day matters, let alone big ones. Side-track non-essentials. Go forward cautiously.
August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — A number of things will have to be organized for the week can proceed efficiently. Emphasize composure, delicacy of approach, kindness in discussion.
September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Strong, favorable aspects encourage your best endeavors. Both business matters and domestic affairs favored. Consider the opinions of all as you go along.
October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio) — Aim at a brighter, efficient start, even in minor matters, to free self for clearer thinking, useful discussions and decisions. A good period for launching new ideas, methods.
November 24 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Jupiter's auspicious aspect favors organizational and executive endeavors; finances, also, make the most of splendid opportunities available now.
December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — A few things, situations could annoy if you remain too philosophical in all matters. Where can you improve methods to insure better days ahead? Look forward, never back.
January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Put your schedule in proper order, then take it on — enthusiastically. Don't put forth a new idea without considering all the angles. Respect your intuition enough to tackle it with confidence, facts.
February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Be sure of facts before acting and be sure to channel your efforts in constructive directions. Some misleading influences now. Your insight and intuition can help tremendously, but die for accurate information just the same.
YOU BORN TODAY: Look for certain great heights in politics, the military, literature, industry, engineering, as poets and patriots. Be consistently determined about your endeavors; refrain from impulsive, whimsical and relentless driving one day then slipping into lethargy another. You succeed often through sheer magnetism, but your consistent work is powerful when regularly maintained. Don't let a tiny that feeds ego. Wait patiently when something MUST move slowly. Love wisely, understand those who are not demonstrative. Birthdate of: John Galsworthy and Sir Walter Scott, authors.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name if the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Seminole Crafts At Area 'City'

CIMARRON CITY, MONTICELLO, N.Y. — The intricate, colorful patchwork for which the Seminole Indians have become famous may be seen "in the making" at the Indian Village bordering the western town of Cimarron, here.

Visitors to Cimarron's Indian Village see the Indian women combine the tiny fabric pieces using an electric sewing machine. Thousands of vibrantly colored bits of material are stitched together into patterned strips with the appearance of fine quilting. The strips are then used as inserts to trim shirts, blouses, and skirts, or are sewn together to form the picturesque skirts worn by the Seminoles.

The Indian village, one of the features of the western family theme park, is open to Labor Day this season. Alligator wrestling is on the program three times daily. Western street shows, exciting "train robberies", dramatic "stage coach hold-ups", and numerous audience participation performances are staged. Cowboy-slapstick is featured in the "saloon" which serves soft-drinks only.

A favorite attraction for children is "Brigette" a real live buffalo who roams the range near Kit Carson's Ranch. Picnic and parking facilities are free.

As dwarf stars shrink, they convert gravitational energy into heat and light. They may glow weakly for several billion years before the last ray flickers out.
